Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

With Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

WHILE THE HEART BEATS YOUNG.

While the heart beats young, oh, the splendor of the spring,
With all her dewy jewels on, is not so fair a thing;
The fairest, rarest morning of the blossom time of May
Is not so sweet a season as the season of today,
While youth's diviner climate folds and holds us, close caressed,
As we feel our mothers with us by the touch of face and breast;
Our bare feet in the meadows and our fancies up among
The airy clouds of morning—while the heart beats young!

While the heart beats young and our pulses leap and dance,
With every day a holiday and life a glad romance,
We hear the birds with wonder, and with wonder watch their flight,
Standing still the more enchanted, both of hearing and of sight,
When they have vanished wholly, for, in fancy, wing to wing
We fly to heaven with them, and, returning, still we sing
The praise of this lower heaven with tireless voice and tongue,
Even as the Master sanctions—while the heart beats young.

While the heart beats young! While the heart beats young!
Oh, green and gold old earth of ours, with azure overhung
And looped with rainbows, grant us yet this grassy lap of thine;
We would be still thy children through the shower and the shine!
So pray we, lisping, whispering, in childish love and trust,
With our beseeching hands and faces lifted from the dust,
By terror of the poem, all unwritten and unsung,
Thou givest us an answer, while the heart beats young.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

THE PASSING OF THE LAIRD

A Story of the South African War.

It was that field of dread memory—Magersfontein. From dawn—when the belching hill front of fire had mowed in swathes the ranks of the Black Watch—till dusk—when the last gun had sent its whistling shrapnel—the air had seemed to live and screech and scream and to maim, blast and wither the men of the Highland brigade.

The dark African night had flung its blackness over Magersfontein, and in the scanty scrub and hollows remained those who could not well retire when the bugles, with reluctant notes, sounded the retreat.

Piper Duncan Farquharson sat up and groaned. His last experience of life had been rather mixed. He remembered retiring behind a wire fence, and after he had scampered over the veldt a few dozen yards something happened. What this was Duncan was uncertain, but as he felt his head he knew he had been hit.

The blood had caked hard on his neck and collar, and as he moved it began anew to trickle down his face. He took out his handkerchief and bandaged his wounds as well as he could.

His pipes were safe. He could feel the reeds lying over his knees. He bent to grasp them.

He was tormented with an awful thirst. His water bottle was still intact, and he raised it to his lips. Still the thirst continued.

He sat up and considered. Where was his company? Where was the captain and his lieutenant, the young laird, who bore the same name as he bore? He would go to them. So he went.

He rose up and, reeling, fell. He rose again and once more came down. Then he crawled.

There were groans and curses and sobs from the darkness, and sometimes a wild yell tore the night asunder. There were calls for water in all the dialects spoken north of the Tweed and in many forms of southern Anglo-Saxon.

Duncan crawled through them. At last he came to the barbed wire entanglements. As he crawled through these the barbs tore his kilt and hose, and he felt them enter his flesh, but at last he threw himself clear.

Then he rolled down a short way, and a bowlder brought him up. He put out his hand to protect his face and caught another hand, cold and clammy, in his own.

The other groaned aloud.

"Is that you, laird?" said Piper Duncan Farquharson.

"Ah, it's you, Duncan," said Lieutenant Duncan Farquharson.

"Ah, it's me, laird. Are ye sair hurtit?"

"Oh, I don't know, Duncan. For heaven's sake, if you have any water, give me some!"

"I've nae water, laird, but I'll get ye some. Ye are awfu' caul', though," said the piper.

He took off his tunic and wrapped the laird in it as well as could be done under the circumstances.

The laird suddenly stirred.

"Do you mind the loch your father and we two used to fish at the back o' Ben-d-houran? Now, was it a Jock Scott he used? I don't remember."

He shivered; then he came back to Magersfontein.

"Duncan, lad, if you can move, bring me a drink of water."

Duncan sat still and felt his head. He heard with his ears, but his brain had not yet compreliended.

Then consciousness returned to him. He must obey the laird.

It was in these circumstances that Piper Farquharson robbed the dead on Magersfontein.

His field of operation was limited, but he had many within it, limited though it might be.

Duncan pillaged from an officer a silver flask which its owner would never more require.

With other melancholy loot Duncan crawled slowly back to the laird, and, feeling for his face, he poured whisky and water between his lips.

The laird caught his trembling hand.

"Steady, Duncan! I've enough. I'm going. Keep it for yourself."

"Na, na, laird; tak' some mair o't. I'll tak' some mysel', though."

He drank the mixture, and, as the spirit brought back life into his trembling frame, he said:

"Man, laird, I houp that officer chiel was a good levin man. He deserves to gang to a place there's nae sich a drought as there's here."

"You were always plucky, Duncan," said the lieutenant. "But I'm going." His voice was now at a whisper.

"Na, na; ye'll tak' anither drapple!" said the piper, and again he poured a few drops between the laird's lips.

"Duncan, could you play a march before I go?"

"I'll try, but ma heid awfu' queer. Hiv ye my pipes?"

"Yes: I kept them in my left hand."

Piper Farquharson tuned his pipes.

"Now, the 'Haughs o' Cromdale,' Duncan. I'm going," whispered the laird.

"Na, na; yer nae gaun, laird! I'll play ye a reel." And over the desolation floated the springing crispness of the "Perth Hunt."

From the darkness the sentries on the heights and in the trenches fired off their rifles, and their sleepy comrades stood to their arms. These verdomed petticoat rooineks were to make a night attack. Suddenly the music stopped.

"Dae ye mind that? It was danced at yer coming o' age."

"Yes, I remember, Duncan. But play the march and sit down here beside me. I'm cold. It will soon be snow, Duncan."

Duncan, whose head was throbbing with the effort in playing the reel, crawled down beside his laird.

"Aye; I think it will be snow afore mornin," he said.

Then Piper Farquharson played marches and strathspeys, and in the cold and darkness death came to many of his audience. But as they fell asleep and their thirst was sated and their pain eased, their lullaby was, to them, the sweetest they had heard since childhood.

Duncan could play no more. It was indeed only fitfully he had played at all.

And the laird was passing.

"Goodby, old man, and thanks!" sighed the laird. "If you go home, tell them I sent my love. I wrote to them all yesterday. Good"—

There was a slight tinkle, the laird fell sideways. He had gone with his comrades.

The dawn would come soon. Already the summits of the eastern hills were beginning to appear through the grayness. Day was coming, and the night and those who had gone under its blackness were now to be numbered with that which had been.

Duncan, however, was only concerned about one thing.

The laird was gone. He had asked him for a march. He should have one. Duncan rose, propped himself against the bowlder and stood over the body of his lieutenant.

Then over the veldt the low, wailing strains of "Lochaber No More" rose and swelled in the dawn, like the voice of a mother mourning with a sore articulate grief the loss of her children.

It was well played. The infinite sorrow, the wild hopelessness of the music rang out over veldt and kopje, and the more superstitious among the Boers muttered that "it was the wailing of the souls of the petticoat rooineks." It was probably Piper Farquharson's best effort. It was his last.

The Boer sentinel in the advanced trench saw, as the dawn came, a rooinek standing facing him. He was a petticoat and might have thousands behind him. The sentry brought his rifle to the "present." It was an easy shot—a tall man, with no khaki tunic to deceive the marksman. Then the Mauser barked.

In this wise Piper Duncan Farquharson of the Highland brigade rejoined his laird.—Detroit News.

What Is a Mystic?

What is a mystic? The dictionary gives us an answer perhaps, but one wants in a thousand cases something more than the dictionary. We like to make definitions ourselves. This is a stronger tendency than we suspect. A mystic is a man who makes his own definitions.

I knew a man many years ago in a country town where I lived who was a typical nonconformist and an example of self reliance. He was withal a man of strong character and did not ask anybody's good opinion. He was a cabinet maker and always spelled bureau "buro." A man to whom he sent a bill said to him, "This is not the way Webster spells bureau." "Well," said he, "this is the way I spell it, and I have as good a right to my way as Webster has to his." He was a mystic in orthography.

"Ye must be born again." That was mysticism to Nicodemus. His dictionary didn't explain it. Jacob Behmen called the same thing "the morning redness." That, too, defies the dictionary. Swedenborg calls love "fire" and beyond all others in modern times makes definitions of his own. All poets are to some extent mystics, inasmuch as they express themselves in symbols and metaphors.—Coming Age.

Another Mean Man.

"Stimson is a mean man."

"Why so?"

"He's got a way of keeping his wife from going through his pockets for loose change."

"How's that?"

"He spends it all before he gets home."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Altogether Slow.

Merchant—I think I'll have to fire Polk. He's frightfully lazy,

Friend—Slow in everything, eh?

Merchant—Well, no, not everything. He gets tired quick enough.—Philadelphia Press.

His Roundabout Way.

A man was going home to his wife and family. It was growing dark. His road from the station was a lonely one, and he was getting along as fast as he could when he suddenly suspected that a man behind him was following him purposely. The faster he went the faster the man went until they came to a graveyard.

"Now," he said to himself, "I'll find if he's after me." And he entered the churchyard.

The man followed him. Vague visions of revolvers and garroters grew upon him. He made a detour of a splendid mausoleum. Still the man was after him, round and round.

At last he turned and faced the fellow and asked: "What the dickens do you want? What are you following me for?"

"Well, sir, do you always go home like this? I am going up to Mr. Brown's house with a parcel, and the porter at the station told me that if I'd follow you I should find the place, as you live next door. Are you going home at all tonight?"—Columbian.

What Is It?

A man who has been running a race with steam and electricity for years, finds himself suddenly stopped. It seems as if a cold hand clutched his heart. His brain whirls; he can hardly see. "What is it?" he asks himself as the attack passes.

If his question meets a right answer, he'll be told that his seizure is a warning to pay more attention to his stomach, which is already deranged by irregular meals and rich foods.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health.

"About ten years ago I began to have trouble with my stomach," writes Mr. Wm. Connolly, of 535 Walnut Street, Lorain, Ohio. "It got so bad that I had to lay off quite often—two and three days in a week. I have been treated by the best doctors in this city, but got no help. Some said I had cancer of the stomach, others catarrh, others dyspepsia. Then I wrote to you for advice. You advised the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines I have taken as directed. I commenced to get better from the start, and have not lost a day this summer on account of my stomach. I feel tip-top, and better than I have for ten years."

Keep the bowels healthy by using Dr. Pierce's Pellets. They don't gripe.

THE much-talked-of extension of the California Northwestern railway is now a reality. The road is to be extended sixty miles beyond Ukiah into the rich redwood forest country of Mendocino and Humboldt counties. The contract for the first ten miles of the extension has been let and the contractors have already commenced to get the building material on the ground. The construction of the sixty miles will involve an expenditure of $2,000,000. In the natural order of things the California Northwestern will eventually be extended through the Beckwith Pass and become one of the great transcontinental lines of railway, as the country it is now running through and heading for is destined to become with railroad aid the most resourceful section of California.

HEAVY showers of rain Monday night and a slight frost Wednesday morning were something unusual for September weather in the Sonoma Valley and local weather prophets say that it portends an early and wet winter. Now that the vintage season is near at hand the lowering weather of the past week has reminded the vineyardist of the disastrous October rains which for the most part destroyed the grape crop in this valley nine years ago, and he will not rest easy until his grapes have been picked and worked up into wine. Wine-making will commence about September 15th this season.

THE Santa Cruz Convention completed its labors Wednesday night. The following were nominated for Congressmen: First District—Frank L. Coombs of Napa. Second District—S. D. Woods of San Joaquin. Third District—Victor Metcalf, Alameda. Fourth District—J. Kahn, San Francisco. Fifth District—Eugene F. Loud.

FATHER WAUGH of Petaluma, the pioneer Methodist minister and founder of the Band of Hope in this State, is dead. He died suddenly at the home of relatives in Williams where he had been visiting. The remains are now in Petaluma and the funeral will take place to-day. The aged divine was born 94 years ago.

SONOMA-MARIN DISTRICT FAIR.

Will Be Held in Santa Rosa This Year.

The Fair will be one of the most attractive ever held in the Fourth Agricultural district. There will be a grand stock parade every day, band concerts and four days will be devoted to racing. Santa Rosa is preparing to receive all visitors and hotel and other accommodations will be ample for the big crowd that will be present.

THE OBSERVER.

Detroit's Doric Column.

On July 24th, 1901, the people of Detroit will celebrate the bicentennial anniversary of the founding of their city. The principal feature of this celebration will be the unveiling of a Doric column of such dimensions that it will be architecturally unique. The shaft will measure twenty-four feet in diameter and rise two hundred and twenty feet. No column hitherto erected has approached to within one-half this magnitude. Double the height of the Palace Hotel and then place our Bank building on top of it and you have an approximate idea of the height of this column. If it were lying on the ground, a person standing on its side could look over most of the roofs in Sonoma. But its beauty consists not only in its magnitude—its location is superb. Overlooking the waters that connect Lake St. Claire with Lake Erie it will ever be seen as a pillar of light by by day and a beacon of fire by night, for the masonry is to be of gleaming white American marble and the capital is to be surmounted with an immense brazen tripod from which a flame of natural gas will flare into the night. The cost is estimated at one million dollars. This is to be raised entirely by voluntary subscriptions from those of every class and condition—shop girls, bankers, mechanics, clerks, lawyers, factory boys, merchants and doctors—every body giving as he can. This is the way to do things. The people of Detroit will take more pride in their city and have more love for their homes for the simple reason that this Doric column will add to the beauty of each. And since we have touched upon civic pride, would we not be a little more proud of our town if the Plaza contained a building whose lines were drawn in better accord with the elements of beauty than are those of the ramshackle that now encumbers it?

Huntington and the Man with the Hoe.

The papers announce that it was the late C. P. Huntington who offered a prize of seven hundred dollars for the best poem submitted in answer to Edward Markham's "The Man With the Hoe." Mr. Huntington disbelieved the philosophy of this poem and probably looked upon it as a pernicious influence in our social life where everybody, as well as he, could see the baneful estrangement that had of late years been growing up between "the man who has and the man who hasn't." Now, Mr. Markham comes forward with another defense of his poem, stating that the man described is the one almost on the verge of serfdom, literally working such long, unhappy hours that he has neither energy nor time to play or recreate himself in any way. This explanation cheapens the poem—refuses to it the statement of an universal truth. "The Man" depicted in this poem, according to the larger interpretation, is any one who has not done what he might have done for the betterment of the world and himself; the "lords and masters" are those who have in any way, either active or passive, prevented "The Man" from doing what he might have done for the betterment of the world and himself. If Mr. Huntington, with his magnificent physique and brains, did not do as much good for the world and himself as he might have done, he was a man with the hoe, and he was one of the "lords and masters" of the poem if he in any way prevented the accomplishment of good in the world. Rightly viewed this poem would seem to be a powerful statement of the Golden Rule, but if we accept the author's explanation the poem becomes a diatribe against the rich. It looks as though Mr. Markham is trying to make the creations of his highly poetic nature render service to his "isms."

Sonoma's Fine Vineyards.

Now is the time for those who live in town to visit the vineyards, and nowhere can this be done to better advantage than in this valley, for here are some of the finest vineyards in the State. At present the vines are in full fruitage. Before long they will be stripped and bare. And when visiting a vineyard walk through it, not by it. Lift up the branches and see the rich clusters—notice the varying shapes and sizes of the branches. Some are little, some are big. On some the berries are thickly crowded together. On others they are thinly scattered. There are a thousand changing forms of beauty to please the eye. Observe the different leaf shapes and colors, characteristic of the several varieties, and you will find them as dissimilar as men. Such a visit as this will repay any one, and now is the time to make it.

Sent to Jail for Thirty Days.

John Frederickson, a rattled-weeded Swede, was arrested last Saturday by City Marshal Albertson on a charge of disturbing the peace. The arrest was made at the instigation of Mrs. Jansen, whose husband is absent in Nome. Frederickson for some days previous to his arrest had been raising Cain in the vicinity of the Jansen premises. This so annoyed Mrs. Jansen that she determined to have the fellow arrested. He was taken forthwith before Judge Cheney and pleading guilty to the charge was given thirty days in the County Jail. He was taken to Santa Rosa Saturday evening.

Stop your cough by using the family remedy that has been curing coughs and colds of every kind for over sixty years. You can't afford to be without it.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

CITY OFFICIAL PAPER.

Local Happenings

Fruit Thieves.

Reckless parties from the city rusticating in different parts of the valley during the past Summer have played havoc with Sonoma Valley orchards. Many farms have been invaded and quantities of fruit stolen. Not content with taking the fruit large limbs of cherry and apricot trees heavily laden with fruit have been ruthlessly broken off and carried away bodily to the city by these marauders. Now, that grapes are ripening vineyards are being raided by these gentry and grapes by the basketful carried away. So great has this nuisance become that many of our farmers have determined to put a stop to the promiscuous robbing of their orchards and vineyards and an effort will be made to arrest every person invading their premises and parloining fruit and prosecuting them to the full extent of the law. The way things look now a Sonoma Valley farmer has no rights which these orchard and vineyard raiders are bound to respect.

Still More Counterfeiting.

The Secret Service has just unearthed another band of counterfeitors in a suburb of New York City, and secured a large quantity of bogus $5 bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected by counterfeiters for imitation, notably the celebrated Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals for common disorders like fever, ague, malaria, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. The Bitters sets things right in the stomach and when the stomach is in good working order it makes good blood and plenty of it. In this manner the Bitters get at the seat of strength and vitality, and restore vigor to the weak and debilitated. Beware of counterfeits when buying. Always go to reliable druggists who have the reputation of giving what you ask for.

Wilpret, Who Shot Barker, Discharged From Custody.

As predicted in these columns Charles Barker, who was shot by G. A. Wilpret on the O'Donnell ranch, Glen Ellen, a couple of months ago, failed to appear against his assailant in the Superior Court of this county for the second time last Tuesday. In consequence Wilpret was discharged from custody and is now a free man.

Barker was clearly in the wrong and his failure to appear against Wilpret proves it. After the latter had shot Barker he surrendered his pistol to other employees on the ranch, claiming that he had shot in self-defense, as he had been knocked down by Barker and was in danger of great bodily injury when he fired the shot. The failure of Barker to materialize last Tuesday saved the county considerable useless expense as a conviction could never have been secured. The law was all on the side of the accused.

City Trustees Meeting.

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the City Trustees, held last Wednesday evening, Trustees Duhring, Davis, Hotz and Ciucci were present.

Clerk Small, after reading the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved, reported that he had waited upon Deputy County Clerk Nagle and enterviewed him in regard to his bill for election supplies. Mr. Nagle contended that the bill of $20.50 was a proper charge against the city, and after listening to Clerk Small the Trustees ordered the bill paid.

Ordinance No. 67, fixing the water rates for the fiscal year ending July 1st, 1901, was then read and passed to print.

Action on the revised city ordinances was deferred.

The sum of $100 was appropriated for graveling the streets.

The following bills were ordered paid :

John N. Stademan, street sprinkling	$ 65.30
A. Astill, electric light	51.00
Jas. H. Albertson, salary	15.00
D. A. Fussell, hauling gravel	1.75
S. Petersen, cleaning streets	4.00
F. G. Nagle, election supplies	20.50
Total	$157.55

The Plaza Committee was instructed to make necessary repairs on the City Pavilion. The Board then adjourned.

$100 Reward $100.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Ducks by the Thousands.

Great sport is ahead for duck-shooters in the Sonoma marshes when the season opens. Jos. Keechler, foreman of the Jones ranch, was in town Wednesday, and says that he has never in all his life seen so many ducks at this season of the year in the tules bordering Sonoma and First and Second Napa creeks. Large flocks of the birds can also be seen by passengers on the morning trains of the California Northwestern. One day this week a flock of between 1000 and 2000 sprig and mallard were observed flying over the tules near Sears' Point to say nothing of numerous smaller flocks. There is going to be good shooting in the marshes this winter and don't you forget it.

THE UNREAD ARTICLE

The fact that I am going to marry at last seems to surprise my friends. I am not so old that happiness should turn away from me or that I should forego the pleasure of accepting after all these years the gifts that she is willing to bestow upon me.

This is the second time that I have met Mme. Dervilly on the road of my life. I have loved her since she was a young girl, named Marthe Rambert, and my stupid timidity prevented my telling her the state of my feelings. To tell you what I suffered when she married Dervilly would not interest you. That suffering was cruel, and after 15 years I have not forgotten it. That is the reason I have never married. Having lost the one woman I could ever really love, I have preferred to keep my freedom and dream of her.

I have already said that when she was young and within reach my timidity served me very badly. Once every two weeks her mother introduced the young people of our set, and not for an empire would I have missed even one of those opportunities for seeing the charming daughter of the house.

It may have been that my fortune, inferior to hers, inspired me with honorable scruples, or that I thought it impossible that I could discover in her feelings like my own, or that it was merely an exaggerated modesty which caused me to hold my tongue. At any rate the day arrived when I was told that Mlle. Rambert had been asked in marriage and had accepted.

With death in my heart I went to make my last call and offer my congratulations. Oh, the misery of my mind as I waited in the drawing room! My heart beat to suffocation, and I felt choked at the idea of talking, of saying polite things about future happiness when I felt like nothing but sobbing out my own love and grief.

She, too, seemed troubled; she was nervous, her face was pale and her eyes red, as though she had been crying.

We had tea, and I thought I would drop my cup my hands trembled so. Her mother was with us, and to me that mattered nothing, as I would not have dared to say anything which she might not hear. We sat and talked, though I have not the faintest idea now of anything that was said. Marthe, I remember, took up a magazine, and for several moments appeared deeply engrossed in it, while her mother and I carried on the conversation.

When I rose to go, she handed me the magazine, open at the place where she had been reading, saying:

"Read that article. You will find it interesting, I think."

I turned down the leaf without looking at the page and made my farewells as briefly as possible. I was sure that Marthe pressed my hand. As I walked home I reflected that her conduct had been singular, and I do not know what wild hope sprang up in my heart. That hope was doomed to a sudden death, however. Imagine my feelings when I opened the magazine and found the article which she had advised me to read entitled:

"The Examination of Insects."

Needless to say, I never read the article. The book I kept, however, with two other treasures from her: one a little photograph, the other a faded rose. The three I put away together, and I felt bitter toward her who had mocked me in my sorrow.

The years passed, and I did not try to see her again, though I still thought of her always. In ten years her husband died, and I heard that she was coming back to Paris to live. She did not come, however, and I heard of her from time to time at first in one place and then another. The years passed, and I was constantly expecting to hear that she had married again, for rumor had it that there was many a man who would have been glad to make this beautiful Mme. Dervilly his wife.

At last, five years after her husband's death, she came to Paris. I met her one morning on the Bois, and she recognized me, but bowed very coldly. In the 15 years that I had not seen her my own bitter feelings had vanished, and at sight of her all my old love flamed up. Returning home that day, I went to the drawer in my desk where I kept my souvenirs of her and drew out the photograph. It was yellow and faded, but I could see only the sweet face, scarcely younger and not so beautiful as that of the woman I had met on the street that day. In the girl there had been promise; in the woman there was fulfillment.

The magazine lay there, and I took it, wondering for the thousandth time why I had been advised to read an article on insects. Turning to it, I decided to read it through for the first time. As my eyes followed the lines I noticed little marks under certain words, marks evidently made by a finger nail. Excitedly I seized a pencil and paper and wrote down the marked words in their order and finally had before my astonished eyes this sentence:

"Tomorrow at 4 o'clock I will be here alone. If you wish to see me, come. You and you alone can prevent my marriage."

Without waiting to dress, I sought out Mme. Dervilly's hotel. I found her alone. How my explanation was made I do not know. I was no longer timid; my tongue flew over the love I had felt for her as a girl, over all the years of constancy to the present. She had her confession to make too. She told me how I had betrayed myself on that last visit, and that she was determined to give me a chance to speak to her alone. She had felt shamed and unhappy when I had not come the next day, thinking, of course, that I would discover her message immediately.

We are to be married in August.—Exchange.

A Curious Army Toast.

Of all the British regiments the Welsh fusileers have the most curious army toast. It forms part of the ceremony of the grand dinner given annually on St. David's day. After the dinner the drum major, accompanied by the goat, the mascot of the fusileers, bedecked with rosettes of red and blue ribbon, marches around the table, carrying a plate of leeks. Every officer or guest who has never eaten one before is obliged to do so, standing on his chair, with one foot on the table, while the drummers beat a roll behind his chair. He is then considered a true Welshman. All the toasts are coupled with the name of St. David. It is in much this way that the toast with highland honors is drunk. Each guest stands with one foot on his chair and one on the table, and the pipers a-piping parade the room.

Photographed by Earth Light.

Everybody who loves to watch the heavenly bodies has frequently noticed, when the crescent of the new moon appears in the west, the phenomenon called "the old moon in the young one's arms." Partly embraced by the horns of the crescent is seen the whole round orb of the moon, glimmering with a pale, ashy light. The cause of the appearance is that the earth light upon that part of the moon not reached by the sunshine is sufficiently brilliant to render it faintly visible to our eyes. Successful attempts have been made, particularly in France, to photograph this phenomenon, and the pictures thus produced are very interesting.—Youth's Companion.

Tommy Atkins Buys His Coffin.

When Tommy Atkins arrives in India, he has one rupee per month stopped out of his pay until 15 rupees have been collected for a coffin. This 15 rupees is invested in the regimental soda water machine, and should he die the machine provides him with a coffin and buries him decently, but should he survive when he leaves India he receives back his 15 rupees and his share of the profits of soda water.—New York World.

Legend of the Narcissus.

Daffodil is a corruption of affodilly, which is derived from Asphodelus. Its other name is narcissus, and the legend of the latter name is well known—how Narcissus, for whom a nymph died, was punished by seeing his own face in a pool of water and becoming so infatuated with it that he was spellbound to the spot till he pined away and died and was changed into the flower that bears his name today.

He Won.

"How is your brother, Tommy?"

"Ill in bed, miss. He's hurt himself."

"How did he do that?"

"We were playing at who could lean farthest out of the window, and he won."

CURED OF CHRONIC DIARRHOEA AFTER THIRTY YEARS OF SUFFERING.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by F. Duhring.

The Best Prescription Is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic.

The Formula Is Plainly Printed on Every Bottle, So That the People May Know Just What They Are Taking.

Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called "Tasteless" chill tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect. You are not experimenting when you take Grove's—its superiority and excellence having long been established. Grove's is the only Chill Cure sold throughout the entire malarial sections of the United States. No Cure, No Pay. Price, 50c.

A Mother's Plain Words

"I suppose you will be astonished when I tell you that six years ago I was in a most dangerous condition with bronchitis and lung trouble, because you can see how well and strong I am now. The attack at that time caused terrible pain in my chest and lungs. I could hardly move, and to stoop caused intense suffering. Someone advised Acker's English Remedy, and I thought I would try it, although I confess that down in my heart I had little faith in it. The first bottle gave great relief, and the second bottle made me the healthy woman I am today. My husband's lungs are weak also, and he cured himself with the same grand old remedy. Our boy and girl have both been saved by it from death by croup. I know this is so, for when they were attacked in the night I had a bottle in the closet, and by acting quickly that fatal malady was easily overcome. We always give it to the children when they have a cough or cold, and we would not be without it for anything. My sister will tell you also, if you ask her, that it is a medicine that can always be depended upon for all the troubles of the breathing organs. I tell all our neighbors about Acker's English Remedy whenever I get a chance, and there are plenty of people around Mechanicsville, N. Y., where I live, who would no more think of going to bed at night without a bottle of it in the house than they would of leaving their doors wide open. As I look at it, parents are criminally responsible when they allow their children to die under their very eyes with croup, because here is a certain remedy that will conquer the terrible monster every time."

(Signed) MRS. FLOYD FOWLER.

Acker's English Remedy is sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee that your money will be refunded in case of failure. 25c., 50c., and $1 a bottle in United States and Canada. In England, 1s. 2d., 2s. 3d., and 4s. 6d.
